Agenda

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 2025

Economic systems are a structural driver (or determinant) of population health. This event will critically examine the intersection of the US economic system and democracy, and how interactions between the two, shape health and health inequities. Presentations and discussion may reflect on how democratizing our economic system can mitigate harmful dynamics currently exacerbating health inequities and poor health outcomes. Participants may also explore models and approaches that show promise in spurring change toward a more broadly prosperous democracy and a more democratic economy that in turn advance population health and health equity.

Learning objectives:

- Explore historical connections between governance systems and economic structures and examine their evolution over time.
- Understand how Economic inequality and the prioritization of economic growth above all else are negatively impacting human health and the environment.
- Analyze the challenges to our commitments to inclusive democracy and an equitable economy.
- Learn about examples of democratic governance in local/grassroots economic systems

Article II. Biosketches

Ana Diez Roux, Roundtable Co-Chair

Ana V. Diez Roux, M.D., Ph.D., M.P.H., is Distinguished University Professor of Epidemiology at the Dornsife School of Public Health and Director of the Drexel Urban Health Collaborative. Originally trained as a pediatrician in her native Buenos Aires, she completed public health training at the Johns Hopkins University School of Hygiene and Public Health. Before joining Drexel University, she served on the faculties of Columbia University and the University of Michigan, where she was Chair of the Department of Epidemiology and Director of the Center for Social Epidemiology and Population Health. Dr. Diez Roux is internationally known for her research on the social determinants of population health and the study of how neighborhoods affect health. Her work on neighborhood health effects has been highly influential in the policy debate on population health and its determinants.

Dr. Diez Roux has served on numerous editorial boards, review panels and advisory committees including most recently the Clean Air Scientific Advisory Committee (CASAC) of the Environmental Protection Agency (as Chair), the Board of Scientific Counselors (BSC) of the National Center for Health Statistics, the Committee on Health and Wellbeing in the Changing Urban Environment of the International Council for Science (ISCUS), and CDCs Community Preventive Services Taskforce. She has received the Wade Hampton Frost Award for her contributions to public health from the American Public Health Association and the Award for Outstanding Contributions to Epidemiology from the American College of Epidemiology. She is also an elected member of the American Epidemiological Society and the Academy of Behavioral Medicine Research. She was elected to the National Academy of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences in 2009.

Mary Pittman, Roundtable Co-Chair

Mary Pittman, DrPH, recently stepped down from her role as chief executive officer and president of the Public Health Institute (PHI), a U.S. and global non-profit public health organization dedicated to improving health and equity through economic, social, and healthcare innovation. Pittman is a national leader in community health, addressing social determinants leading to health inequities and promoting prevention and quality of care. Her experience in public health and healthcare, including Medicaid financing and safety net systems, make her an expert adviser in the field of population health and building healthier and more equitable communities and health systems. She has designed and launched leadership programs for women in health as well as for other population health leaders.

Pittman served for six years on the National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine Roundtable on Population Health Improvement, and the Healthy People 2030 advisory committee to the Secretary of HHS. She served as an expert advisor to the Let's Get Healthy California Task Force, and serves on numerous advisory boards for UC Berkeley, School of Public Health, Loma Linda School of Public Health, Charles Drew University Medical School, and other non-profits and a small diagnostic company.

Dana Brown

Dana Brown, M.Sc., is the Health and Economy Fellow at The Democracy Collaborative where her research focuses on economic transformation for health and well-being. She is a leading expert on public pharmaceutical R&D and manufacturing and a patient-advocate active in the access to medicines and disability justice movements. Her work has appeared in The Journal of Law Medicine and Ethics, STAT news, The Guardian and numerous other outlets. Brown holds an MSc in Public Health (health economics) from the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine and a BA in Sociology from Cornell University.

Trisha Chakrabarti

Trisha Chakrabarti, M.P.H., M.P.P., is the Manager of the Equitable Food Oriented Development (EFOD) Collaborative. Trisha leads a collective strategy building the field of Equitable Food Oriented Development, alongside the Collaborative's national steering committee of community-rooted organizations. Prior to that, she was Director of Programs and Policy at Mandela Partners, where she led community-based programming and research in food access, clinical-community linkages, SNAP/EBT acceptance, and healthy retailing.

Trisha has worked in community food programming at the San Francisco/Marin Food Bank, was a research fellow at Food First, and has led participatory food access research and advocacy initiatives with restaurant workers and systems-impacted youth. She grew up in the South Asian diaspora and sees a community-owned food system as a key indicator of political and economic sovereignty. She holds a BA in Political Economy from UC Berkeley, and Masters Degrees in Food Policy and Public Health from Tufts University, where she was a Block Direct Service Fellow.

Paula Daniels

Paula Daniels is the inaugural Executive Director of the Los Angeles County Office of Food Equity, a partnership between Los Angeles County and philanthropic organizations. She is also Co-founder and Founding Chair of the Center for Good Food Purchasing, whose program received a 2018 Future Policy award.

Paula is a lawyer who has held senior positions in California and Los Angeles government, including Senior Advisor on Food Policy to Mayor Villaraigosa, where she founded the Los Angeles Food Policy Council. She has taught food policy at UCLA and UC Berkeley, and is an Ashoka Fellow and Stanton Fellow of the Durfee Foundation.

Natalie Foster

Natalie Foster is the President and co-founder of the Economic Security Project, a network dedicated to advancing a guaranteed income in America and reining in the unprecedented concentration of corporate power, and a senior fellow at The Aspen Institute Future of Work Initiative.

Prior to that she was the CEO and co-founder of Rebuild the Dream, a platform for people-driven economic change, with Van Jones. Foster served as digital director for President Obama's Organizing for America (OFA) and the Democratic National Committee. She built the first digital department at the Sierra Club and served as the deputy organizing director for MoveOn.org. She's been awarded fellowships at the Institute for the Future, Rockwood Leadership Institute and New America California, and is a board member of the California Budget and Policy Center, the Change.org global foundation and Liberation in a Generation, a project to close the racial wealth gap.

Jonathon Freeman

Jonathon Freeman, M.A., is the Program Officer for AmbitioUS. AmbitioUS, an initiative of the Center for Cultural Innovation (CCI), encourages the development of burgeoning alternative economies and fresh social contracts in ways artists and cultural communities can achieve financial freedom. Jonathon brings over 20 years of experience in community-based arts and culture work. He is a founding member of the Native Roots Network, an Indigenous community development organization that, most notably, has curated and organized Our Story: Native Art Exhibitions, advocated for Indigenous cultural revitalization, the protection of Indigenous lands and sacred sites, and is incubating Co-Lab Shasta, an intercultural solidarity economy development initiative.

Previously, Jonathon served as the Program Director of the Seventh Generation Fund for Indigenous Peoples and as the Board of Directors Vice-Chair for the Local Indians for Education, Inc. His most recent role was as a Community Development Coordinator within the HHS Public Health Branch, where he facilitated a team of Community Organizers and Policy Analysts in equity and well-being initiatives.

Jonathon has an M.A. in Social Justice and Community Organizing from Prescott College, a B.S. in Parks and Natural Resource Management from California State University, Chico, and an A.A. in Indigenous Studies from Deganawidah-Quetzalcoatl University.

Jonathan Heller

Jonathan Heller, Ph.D., recently joined the Population Health Institute at the University of Wisconsin as a Senior Health Equity Fellow. He is the co-founder and until 2020 was the co-director of Human Impact Partners (HIP), a national non-profit focused on bringing the power of public health to campaigns and movements for a just society. Under Jonathan's leadership for 14 years, Human Impact Partners became a national public health leader focused on changing policies related to the social determinants of health by: supporting community organizing groups and campaigns with research and advocacy; conducting leadership development, capacity building, and political education with public health agencies; organizing the public health community; and supporting narrative change initiatives. HIP is credited for advancing a focus on equity and community power building within public health.

Heller received his bachelor's degree from Harvard University and doctorate from University of California, Berkeley, and he served in the Peace Corps in Papua New Guinea. Jonathan is a co-founder and past president of the Society of Practitioners of Health Impact Assessment (SOPHIA) and serves on the board of Community Change.

Amanda Janoo

Amanda Janoo, M.Phil., is an economic policy expert with over a decade of experience working with governments and international development institutions around the world. Her work aims to build just and sustainable economies through goal-oriented and participatory policy design processes.

Prior to joining WEAll, Amanda worked for the United Nations and the African Development Bank as an industrial policy and structural transformation expert. As a Fulbright researcher, she explored the relationship between international trade and informal employment. She graduated from Cambridge University with an MPhil in Development Studies and hails from the green mountain state of Vermont, in the USA.

Tiffany Manuel

Tiffany Manuel, Ph.D., M.P.P., M.P.S., is the founder and CEO of TheCaseMade. She has worked with thousands of passionate social changemakers, innovators and adaptive leaders around the United States who are building better, stronger communities that are diverse, equitable and inclusive. She is the author of Case Made! 10 Powerful Leadership Principles that Win Hearts, Change Minds, and Grow Impact as well as many reports, journal articles and scholarly papers.

Dr.T. grew up in Detroit, Michigan during one of the most turbulent times in the city's history. It was because of the challenges of that experience that she champions better policy, programs, investments and services that can transform our cities and communities for the better. It is also the reason that Dr.T. has worked to expand opportunity, equity and inclusion through 25+ years of professional and volunteer experience spanning the private and non-profit sectors, government and academia.

Trained as a social scientist in quantitative and qualitative methods, she is passionate about translating the insights harvested from her research and practice to improve our ability to build public will around the critical issues that matter most. She holds doctorate and master's degrees in public policy from the University of Massachusetts Boston, a master's degree in political science from Purdue University and a bachelor's degree from the University of Chicago.

Jamila Michener

Jamila Michener, M.A., Ph.D., is an Associate professor in the department of Government. Her research focuses on poverty, racial inequality and public policy in the United States. Her recent book, Fragmented Democracy: Medicaid, Federalism and Unequal Politics (Cambridge University Press) examines how Medicaid--the nation's public health insurance program for people with low income--affects democratic citizenship. Unpacking how federalism transforms Medicaid beneficiaries' interpretations of government and structures their participation in politics, Fragmented Democracy assesses American political life from the vantage point(s) of those who are living in or near poverty, (disproportionately) Black or Latino, and reliant on a federated government for vital resources.

Michener's research has been supported by the Woodrow Wilson Foundation, the Russell Sage Foundation, the National Science Foundation, the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation and the Ford Foundation. She received her MA and PhD from the University of Chicago and her undergraduate degree from Princeton University. Prior to working at Cornell, she was a Robert Wood Johnson Health Policy Scholar at the University of Michigan.

Katherine Newman

Katherine Newman, Ph.D., is the Provost and Executive Vice President of Academic Affairs of the University of California, and the Chancellor's Distinguished Professor of Sociology and Public Policy at UC Berkeley.

Newman is the author of fifteen books on topics ranging from technical education and apprenticeship, to the sociological study of the working poor in America's urban centers, middle class economic insecurity under the brunt of recession, and school violence on a mass scale. She has written extensively on the consequences of globalization for youth in Western Europe, Japan, South Africa and the US, on the impact of regressive taxation on the poor, and on the history of American political opinion on the role of government intervention.

Her 2023 book, coauthored with Dr. Elisabeth Jacobs, a senior fellow in the Center on Labor, Human Services and Population at the Urban Institute, is entitled Moving the Needle: What Tight Labor Markets Do for the Poor. Newman's 2019 book, Downhill From Here: Retirement Insecurity in the Age of Inequality analyzes the impact of pension collapse, two tiered labor contracts, municipal bankruptcy, and the emergence of the "grey labor force" on the nation's retirees.

Newman was previously the University of Massachusetts System Chancellor for Academic Programs, the Senior Vice President for Economic Development and the Torrey Little Professor of Sociology at UMass Amherst, and prior to that, the James B. Knapp Dean of the Arts and Sciences at Johns Hopkins University. She has served as the Forbes Class of 1941 Professor of Sociology and Public Affairs and Director of the Institute for International and Regional Studies at Princeton, the founding Dean of Social Science at the Radcliffe Institute of Advanced Study and the director of Harvard's Multidisciplinary Program on Inequality and Social Policy, where she served as the Malcolm Weiner Professor of Urban Studies in the Kennedy School of Government. She taught for 16 years in the Department of Anthropology at Columbia University and for two years in the School of Law at the University of California Berkeley.

Sharon Kaiulani Odom

Sharon Ka'iulani Odom, R.D., M.P.H., is the Executive Director of Hawaii Good Food Alliance, whose members work for a thriving, sustainable food system. Alliance organizations span five of the eight islands and represent a spectrum of skills and knowledge. From farmers to food hubs to health care, we use our collaborative strengths to bring about equity, justice and well-being.

Kaiulani Odom has been involved in the area of indigenous health for over 35 years. Her specialty is in `Ai Kupele, nutrition from a cultural perspective. It is her goal to support communities of Hawai'i to connect with the `ike and practices passed down by their ancestors, fostering healthy lifestyles for future generations.

She was the first Director of the Roots Program at Kokua Kalihi Valley. Under her direction the program grew to establish two community gardens, a cultural food hub, a café, family health programs, birthing programs, culinary education, and community engagement. Centering around food as a source of nourishment, identity, and connection, project activities built bonds between community members as they cultivated food and medicine, cooked together, shared traditional practices for food preparation, and ate together in common spaces.

Ricardo Salvador

Ricardo Salvador, Ph.D., is a senior scientist with, director of, and now advisor to the Food and Environment Program at the Union of Concerned Scientists. Ricardo Salvador has over four decades of experience working with citizens, scientists, economists, and politicians to transition our current food system into one that grows healthy foods while employing sustainable and socially equitable practices.

Before coming to UCS, Dr. Salvador served as a program officer for food, health, and well-being with the W.K. Kellogg Foundation. In this capacity, he was responsible for conceptualizing and managing the Foundation's food systems programming. He partnered with colleagues to create programs that addressed the connections between food and health, environment, economic development, sovereignty, and social justice.

Prior to that, he was an associate professor of agronomy at Iowa State University. While at ISU, Dr. Salvador taught the first course in sustainable agriculture at a land-grant university, and his graduate students conducted some of the original academic research on community-supported agriculture. He also worked with students to establish ISU's student-operated organic farm, and with other faculty to develop the nation's first sustainable agriculture graduate program in 2000; Dr. Salvador served as the program's first chair. Dr. Salvador also worked as an extension agent with Texas A&M University.

Dr. Salvador earned a B.S. in agricultural science from New Mexico State University. He holds an M.S. and Ph.D. in crop production and physiology from Iowa State University.

Pete Upton

Pete Upton (Ponca Tribe of Nebraska) is the Chairperson, CEO, in addition to being the Executive Director of Native360 Loan Fund, a certified Native Community Development Financial Institution that focuses on entrepreneurship and financial literacy development for Native Americans. Mr. Upton has been involved with the Native CDFI Network since it was a grassroots movement. From 2011-2012, he served on the steering committee that was instrumental in the Native CDFI Network's initial organizational development steps. In 2012, Mr. Upton became a founding board member and served as the Chairperson for the Peer Learning Committee.

In 2023, Upton led the Native CDFI Network in a groundbreaking effort to catalyze clean energy infrastructure development in Native communities nationwide. The Native CDFI Network, in a historic bid, submitted a comprehensive application to the Clean Communities Investment Accelerator, seeking several hundred million dollars to finance clean energy projects in Native communities through a collaborative effort involving 63 certified Native community development financial institutions and other qualified lenders across all 10 EPA regions.

Serving as Executive Director of Native360 Loan Fund since 2011, Mr. Upton has built the organization from its start-up phase into a successful lending organization that continues to experience growth while ever increasing its community impact. As Native360 serves Native communities in three states, Mr. Upton understands the challenges of serving both rural and urban areas in various different jurisdictions. He values strong networks and cultivates partnerships to deliver technical assistance throughout a vast service area. Mr. Upton is a powerful advocate for equal access to capital.

Haleh Zandi

Haleh Zandi co-founded a non-profit organization called Planting Justice in 2009 that builds sustainable solutions at the intersection of urban farming, prison abolition, and land reclamation. Over a period of 12 years, Haleh led in the development of an innovative non-profit model that now operates 4 commercial properties on a total of 11 acres in unceded Ohlone land.

Haleh has been an integral part of forming a national collaborative called EFOD, Equitable Food Oriented Development, a multiracial coalition of food systems leaders organizing across Turtle Island. Together they co-designed the EFOD Fund to support and uplift emerging food justice enterprises at the intersection of health and economic development.

Haleh is part of a 13-acre land-based community with natural buildings that demonstrate low-carbon earthen home construction, community-scale sustainable food production, and healthy watershed management.

In her role with Pisces Foundation and ClimateWorks, in 2024 Haleh launched FAST Ports, committed to catalyzing resources and scaling action to mitigate black carbon and protect communities living and working adjacent to ports by taking advantage of federal funding.

Article IV. Preventing Discrimination, Harassment, and Bullying Expectations for Participants in NASEM Activities

The National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine (NASEM) are committed to the principles of diversity, integrity, civility, and respect in all of our activities. We look to you to be a partner in this commitment by helping us to maintain a professional and cordial environment. All forms of discrimination, harassment, and bullying are prohibited in any NASEM activity. This commitment applies to all participants in all settings and locations in which NASEM work and activities are conducted, including committee meetings, workshops, conferences, and other work and social functions where employees, volunteers, sponsors, vendors, or guests are present.

Discrimination is prejudicial treatment of individuals or groups of people based on their race, ethnicity, color, national origin, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, age, religion, disability, veteran status, or any other characteristic protected by applicable laws.

Sexual harassment is unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and other verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature that creates an intimidating, hostile, or offensive environment.

Other types of harassment include any verbal or physical conduct directed at individuals or groups of people because of their race, ethnicity, color, national origin, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, age, religion, disability, veteran status, or any other characteristic protected by applicable laws, that creates an intimidating, hostile, or offensive environment.

Bullying is unwelcome, aggressive behavior involving the use of influence, threat, intimidation, or coercion to dominate others in the professional environment.

Section 4.01 REPORTING AND RESOLUTION

Any violation of this policy should be reported. If you experience or witness discrimination, harassment, or bullying, you are encouraged to make your unease or disapproval known to the individual, if you are comfortable doing so. You are also urged to report any incident by:

- Filing a complaint with the Office of Human Resources at 202-334-3400, or
- Reporting the incident to an employee involved in the activity in which the member or volunteer is participating, who will then file a complaint with the Office of Human Resources.

Complaints should be filed as soon as possible after an incident. To ensure the prompt and thorough investigation of the complaint, the complainant should provide as much information as is possible, such as names, dates, locations, and steps taken. The Office of Human Resources will investigate the alleged violation in consultation with the Office of the General Counsel.

If an investigation results in a finding that an individual has committed a violation, NASEM will take the actions necessary to protect those involved in its activities from any future discrimination, harassment, or bullying, including in appropriate circumstances the removal of an individual from current NASEM activities and a ban on participation in future activities.

Section 4.02 CONFIDENTIALITY

Information contained in a complaint is kept confidential, and information is revealed only on a need-to-know basis. NASEM will not retaliate or tolerate retaliation against anyone who makes a good faith report of discrimination, harassment, or bullying.
